Crucial Do's

- Do use standard layout to convey the core objective in a comprehensive manner.
- Do understand the main purpose of making an analysis.
- Do relate your analysis with the thesis statement of the essay to stay on track.
- Do scan the whole essay and pinpoint basic points to include in the outline.
- Do write each key sentence in the new paragraph and apply transitions among parts of an essay.
- Do compose and depict the key purpose for the analytical writing's topic to provide a brief outline to the target audience.
- Do share relevant info and demonstrate it precisely but completely.
- Do use a concrete and explicit tone that is scientifically aligned with the language of the journal.

Crucial Don'ts

- Don't incorporate irrelevant details in the analysis to fill out the pages.

- Don't make an essay quite long as it will drop the attention of the audience.
- Don't rely merely on the info provided in the abstract as it is already in condensed form.
- Don't copy the material as it will plagiarize your summary writing
- Don't use too many wordiness-like adverbs that are not really important.
- Do not incorporate any generalities because they would eradicate the focus and conciseness of your analytical piece.
- Don't quote critical views of other personalities, rather paraphrase all stuff in your own words to enhance the credibility of the analysis.
